

BOURNE GRAMMAR SCHOOL BULLETIN

Week ending Friday 20 January 2023

From Alastair Anderson, Headteacher

This week has been particularly intense. Formal assessments for Years 9 and 10, Careers' interviews for Year 11 gathering pace, marking a-plenty for our teaching staff after the Year 13 mocks finished last week, the final UCAS deadline for Year 13 creeping closer, reports in of the excellent ongoing work being done by our student councils and the announcement of strike action from the NEU for four days in February/March. One of the great things about schools is that there is never a dull day: there are times when the variety and unpredictability of school life can be a frustration but for the most part the energy within a large, organic organisation like Bourne Grammar School with such a proud tradition of success and a determination to give the best possible experience to our students, overcomes all obstacles.

And in this context, I think it is time to offer a particular vote of thanks to our staff, both teaching and non-teaching. We have building work still causing problems with work areas: portaloos for the ladies literally freezing solid in the sub-zero overnight temperatures, a shortage of onsite parking, less than ideal meeting and temporary spaces, few areas for staff to congregate, disruption to some classrooms and – on top of it all – lots of assessment and examination marking. But I have yet to walk into a staff briefing where the Drama Studio (the location of these meetings) is not full of smiles, of camaraderie and of positive energy. Things are not great out in the wider world at the moment but every day the excellent attitude of our staff shows that Bourne Grammar School is in good health and we should be as proud of our staff as we are of our students. Well done to all.

Finally, a shout out to Mr Farrow and the Chess Team who are away in a Regional Cup Match against Nottingham High School next week having qualified for the Regional Competition recently. The lunchtime chess club is wonderfully vibrant and very well attended and it is great to see this fabulous game given such a high profile at BGS. Good luck to all the players involved.
